

JAPAN'S REFUSAL TO GIVE INFORMATION AWAITS APPROVAL

Must Be Passed By Emperor And Members of His Cabinet

IS EXPECTED ON FRIDAY

Showdown On World Naval Race is Imminent and Inevitable

By James R. Young

TOKYO, Feb. 10.—(INS) Japan's refusal to furnish the information on her naval building plans requested by the United States, Britain and France today awaited final approval by Emperor Hirohito and members of his cabinet before being transmitted to Washington, London and Paris.

Full texts of the notes in which Japan will reply to the tri-power request for information are expected to receive final scrutiny and approval tonight. They will be handed to the Ambassadors of the three powers tomorrow.

At the same time the Japanese reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's protest against alleged mistreatment of American nationals and property in China will be approved and handed to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew.

The virtual certainty that Japan will turn thumbs down on the American, British and French demands for information about Tokyo's naval building plans made a showdown on the world naval race both imminent and inevitable, in the opinion of well-informed observers here.

Warren P. Snyder, Superintendent of Bristol Schools, Speaks to Mothers

MUSIC, DANCING FOLLOW

Problems which face the public schools today, and which were undreamed of one or two generations ago, were the subjects for discussion at the monthly meeting of Mothers Association, Bristol public schools, last evening. The meeting was held in the high school auditorium, with Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of the local public schools, as the speaker.

Mr. Snyder also brought to the members the legislation enacted at the last session of the state legislature which affects the school system. A general discussion followed with questions being asked by the mothers, and answered by the superintendent. Outstanding in the discussion period was the problem brought about by the law which states that boys and girls must attend school until 18 years of age. The age for attendance at the 1938-39 term is 17, and for the following years it will be 18.

The larger, general enrollment, and the different social responsibilities which have developed for the schools, came in for discussion also.

Mrs. David Neill, president of the Mothers' Association, presided last evening. During the business period plans were made for the annual card party to be held February 17th. The meeting was later turned over to the entertainment committee, with Mrs. Maurice Roche, as chairman. 1,000 JAM THEATRE FOR DEDICATORY PROGRAM

Howard I. James Makes The Dedication Address; Legion Cadets Perform

EXTEND FELICITATIONS

More than 1,000 men, women and children, occupying every available seat, witnessed the dedication exercises, and the initial motion picture program, in Bristol's newest playhouse, the "Bristol," last evening.

Hundreds more, disappointed at being unable to gain entrance for the dedicatory program, found it necessary to wait until the second performance of the evening. Long before 6.30, the appointed hour for opening of the doors of the new and modern theatre located on Radcliffe street at Market, crowded lined the sidewalk. By seven o'clock the management of the theatre found it necessary to close the doors.

An American flag was projected onto the screen, and then "Bristol's finest," the American Legion Cadets, Robert W. Bracken Post, with military stride, marched to the platform, there to perform on this auspicious occasion. Selections by this aggregation, which on three occasions has become the state champion cadet corps, met with rousing applause, the lads then being accorded seats of honor in the balcony.

Howard I. James, Bristol borough solicitor, delivered the dedicatory address, congratulating James Egnal, builder of the theatre; his son, "Ned" Egnal, manager of the "Bristol;" and other members of the family, on the splendid structure. Citizens of Bristol were also congratulated upon having had erected for their enjoyment such a modern play-house.

Changes which have been wrought in that particular section of the borough down through the years, were recalled by Mr. James, and he spoke of well-known residents who have passed on. The solicitor mentioned the great change recently made by erection of such a modern and attractive structure. "We all recall the fire which razed the old theatre building which stood on this site," continued Mr. James. "And from the ashes of the ruins grew this magnificent building. This has been a marvelous change. It has improved the whole community. The man responsible for building of this theatre has kept faithfully the promise he made to us—that he would erect a theatre that the townspeople would be proud of. It will be a perpetual monument to him and his enterprise. I dedicate the

Wave of Humanism in Warfare

London, Feb. 10.—A tremendous wave of sentiment for humanism of warfare swept England today as letters poured into newspaper offices from all parts of the country in favor of proposal to restrict combatants to military forces and objectives.

The letters demanded in part that something be done to safeguard women, children and non-combatants from the horrors of modern war, especially aerial warfare.

Proposals for an international agreement to outlaw bombing of non-military subjects evoked spontaneous approval from the British public and promised to develop into one of the greatest non-partisan movements England has ever known.

Denies Fleeing Germany

London, Feb. 10.—A flat denial of reports he had "fled" from Germany was made by former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm in a telephone conversation with the Evening News today. He said "he did not" flee from Germany. "I just came for the winter sports and will return when my holiday is ended."

Bowers' One Hope

Norristown, Feb. 10.—Wendell Forrest Bowers' sole hope for life lay today in commutation of his death sentence by Governor George H. Earle.

Unless executive clemency is invoked, it was pointed out, the 29-year-old ex-reformatory inmate and hoodlum will die in the electric chair for the brutal murder of Mrs. Wilma V. Carpenter, last December 13th. Bowers' execution is scheduled to take place on an undetermined date—is to be set by the Governor—at Bellefonte. His attorney was reported preparing an eleventh hour appeal to the State Pardon Board.

LIEUTENANT MACKEY DISCUSSES AIR CRAFT

Explains Value of Lighter-Than-Air Craft to Presbyterian Brotherhood

INTERESTING MEETING

Explaining the value of lighter-than-air craft during war-time as well as peace-time, Lieutenant Commander D. M. Mackey, Operations Officer of the United States Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., gave an instructive address last night at the monthly meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the Bristol Presbyterian Church.

Lieutenant Mackey stated that today there are four non-rigid airships at Lakehurst which play a definite part in the defense program of the United States. There are two more being built which will be used mostly in the training of students and for patrol ships.

"The ability to scan waters and notice objects by airships is unsurpassable as an aid in the defense program of this nation," stated Lieutenant Mackey. "Also, the use of airships as convoys is valuable as well as their slow speed which make them valuable for coastal patrol. During war-time, convoys would escort ships to their harbors and this proved valuable in detecting submarines."

In reference to rigid airships, Lieutenant Mackey expressed the opinion that he believes most of the higher officers of the Navy are against the building of these crafts and their future is uncertain, although some firms are contemplating building them for commercial use which can hardly be done without government aid.

According to Lieutenant Mackey, the United States Navy has made steady progress with airships and cited the maneuvers conducted by the dirigible, Los Angeles, on the Pacific Coast. The Los Angeles was commissioned to get negative information of planted fleets and this was done within the elapsed time of seventy hours from the time of leaving its Sunnyvale base. No one had advance information as to where the fleet would be "planted."

Another example was the dirigible "Macon" which conducted a scouting cruise with a fleet and according to newspaper reports was theoretically shot down. But the papers failed to mention the fact that several ships were theoretically sunk by the airship before it was "hit" and all this was done despite the fact that the Macon had to "combat" obstacles used by the navy today that were unknown during the World War in which Germany used airships.

"It is just as hard to down an airship as it is a cruiser," said the speaker. During the World War when the German Zep L-6 was fired upon by the British, it was able to return to its base and found that it received six hundred hits. In times of pursuit, there is always a possibility of the dirigibles hiding in the clouds."

The speaker claimed that Germany had 115 airships operating in the war and most of these were used in scouting and patrolling the North Sea. Their value was praised by England's Admiral Jellicoe after the war, when

SOCIAL-SECURITY DEFICIT

Somewhat to the amazement of most persons, the United States Treasury reports that up to January 1 the social-security and railroad-retirement programs had incurred a deficit of $294,681,343.

The official Treasury statement was careful to emphasize that this condition will not be permanent. Blame for the deficit was placed on the use of the funds for purposes other than building up a reserve. Grants to States to aid in getting their programs started accounts for about half the reported expenditures.

Total receipts were given as $666,294,316, while total expenditures were $960,975,659. Administrative expenses were $28,436,410, and the grants to States $326,537,805. Income from social-security and railroad-retirement taxes as classified show: Old-age taxes, $516,980,591; unemployment, $80,649,267, and railroad retirement, $68,661,556.

The amount needed to make up the shortage in social-security taxation is not known. But that it will be considerable is indicated in a statement by Secretary of Labor Perkins that 1,162,000 persons filed claims for unemployment insurance in the first week of this year.

There were received 452,035 new applications for work by the Federal Employment Service in December. This is the largest number since December, 1935. On December 31 there were enrolled 4,874,924 persons seeking employment.

The realization that in a time of comparative prosperity not enough money was being raised to meet social security demands is disconcerting. It naturally raises fears of additional taxation for this purpose and suggests that we may never be able to stand the strain of this load.

SUNFLOWER VS. RAGWEED

Many of mankind's troubles are blamed on mankind's mistakes. Dust storms and droughts, for example, are said to be the consequences of ill-advised plowing of the prairies. And now a more universal nuisance is blamed on much the same cause.

In a majority of cases hay fever is caused by the ubiquitous ragweed. But the ragweed, it is said, was once a "submerged" member of the vegetable kingdom and not nearly so plentiful as nowadays.

The breaking of the soil gave the ragweed its opportunity to increase and multiply and spread its baneful pollen for the irritation of millions of noses. The building of America's vast system of highways was especially favorable to the ragweed, which seems to grow by choice by the side of the road to be an enemy to man.

Observers in New York City, whose discoveries are cautiously confirmed by botanists, have identified a natural enemy of the ragweed in the common sunflower. Where the sunflower grows the ragweed dies out. It has been suggested that an attempt should be made to kill off ragweed by competitive vegetation as insect pests are sometimes fought by matching them with other insects.

But it would need, unfortunately, an enormous planting of sunflowers to crowd out the ragweed. And there is the unhappy possibility that if sunflowers grew everywhere it keep out the ragweed there would soon be a new sort of hay fever due to sunflowers.

greatly in prestige. On the other hand, if Senator Barkley should win without Presidential aid, not only would he feel free of any obligations to Mr. Roosevelt, but most humanly recent over the failure of the President to respond when he needed him.

THEREFORE when Senator Barkley's case was presented, the White House had to "come through." But having "come through" for Senator Barkley, it could not stop. When the claims of Senator Ryan Duffy in Wisconsin and Senator Claude Pepper in Florida were laid down, the President had to "keep going." Senator Duffy and Senator Pepper had each been as unwaveringly loyal as Senator Barkley. Each is in serious trouble in his State. Each needs and wants and feels entitled to the Presidential blessing. There wasn't any way for the President to escape without appearing politically selfish and ungrateful, willing to "go to bat" only for his leader, because his loss would be personally more damaging.

ACCORDINGLY, the President now has cordially endorsed Senator Duffy in Wisconsin, though in that State his real political alliance is with the La Follettes. And in Florida he has endorsed Senator Pepper by proxy, his son James being out from Palm Beach, a eulogistic statement in which he expressed the conviction that the country could not afford to lose Senator Pepper's immensely valuable services—or words to that general effect. Of course, James was sharply rebuked for this "meddling" in State politics by Mr. James Mark Wilcox, who is the leading candidate against the Senator. That, however, did not bother James at all nor prevent the White House preference from being plain.

THE EXPECTATION now is that the next step will be in Ohio, where Senator Bulkley, another of the Senators who "stood by" the President in his effort to pack the court, is in trouble. Former Gov. George White has declared against him and there is a strong Democratic swing against Mr. Bulkley. If the latter wants the Roosevelt endorsement he is bound to get it. He is as much entitled to it as any of them and may need it as much.

"EXTRA FARE" by Edna Robb Webster

SYNOPSIS

Jaxie Cameron, lovely young newspaper columnist, travels west aboard the Big Chief, extra-fare train, in search of copy for "The Friendly Corner," column in the Chicago Star-Tribune. Tommy Ackerman, staff photographer, sees her off, taking a flash-light picture as Jaxie waves farewell from the observation platform. Inside Car 74X, Mose, the porter, is installing those who, for three dramatic days, are to be companions in the swift rush to the Coast. Among the passengers, Jaxie identifies as a bride a girl who dashes into the train laughing excitedly.

CHAPTER II

She was followed instantly by a grinning young man whose hat and shoulders dripped grains of rice and whose arms were laden with bags and cases of vivid orchid leather.

Mose did not require the evidence of the rice to register the newcomers as bride and groom, and he hurried forward, beaming benevolently, to relieve the self-conscious young man of his burdens.

"Yes, suh! I guess you-all take drawin' room A, if ah'm a guessah."

"No—why, er no. . . . It's number nine—lower nine, isn't it, Marie?" The man blushed with confusion.

"Yes, nine," laughed the girl in a shrill voice, still waving at the gawky group on the platform and throwing kisses.

Mose shrugged again and turned about into the car, leading the way to the farthest end. "Wrong again," he mumbled to himself.

A stout, bland gentleman already was settled in section 9, his worn Gladstone bag tucked under the seat that rode forward. He was reading a sales brochure that proclaimed his profession and he glanced up inquiringly as Mose arrived with the shining new orchid luggage, the gushing, giggling bride and the blushing wriggling bridegroom in tow.

"An reckon you-all's gonna hab kinda close quatahs heah," Mose observed, and winked at the bland gentleman, who grinned broad response. "How 'bout settin' dis heah hat box jes' inside dat drawin' room doah, till we know ef it's gonna be occupied?"

The wary bridegroom cast a dubious eye toward the indicated drawing room.

"Just so you don't charge us extra for the space," he laughed ruefully. "I told you that do-dad was one too much to take." He turned toward the girl, excitedly bewildered and striving for composure.

"Oh, Harry dear," she chided him gently.

"Gawd! dey ain't no extry charge," Mose replied with good nature, fitted the rest of the pieces into place, his color-loving eye delighted with the orchid leather and estimating its worth in a swaggering bridegroom's top. "Das all right, suh," he rambled on with his monologue. "Ah's a married man myself, ah is, and ah knows all 'bout dis heah honeymoon business." Another exchange of glances with the bland gentleman.

He stood aside for the bride to take the forward seat which the gallant first occupant of the section had proffered, and became aware of the touch of the young husband's hand as he pressed something into his. Of course embarrassed bridegrooms always were shy about paying tips in the presence of new wives. Mose closed his hand expectantly and almost dropped the coin in his astonishment. A thin dime! Four pieces of orchid leather baggage were good for a dime! In spite of his years of experience with humanity, Mose was still easily deceived by tawdry surface display.

"My gawd!" he ejaculated as he hurried away. "How I does pity dat gal what have jes' acquired dat sightwad for a husband!"

But his manner and expression betrayed nothing of his thoughts as he hastened forward to meet a new group of passengers just entering the car hesitantly. A grave-faced man carried a baby on one arm and a scarred brown leather suitcase in the other hand. A plain little woman followed, holding a small boy by the hand and clasping two smaller bags of cheap patent leather that proclaimed their recent purchase for the occasion.

"Lower 7?" the man said inquiringly, as Mose collected the bags industriously and indicated the section. "How long before you leave?"

"Bout five minutes, now," Mose consulted his wrist watch and bustled away, having bowed his thanks for the quarter which the months and saving our hard-earned money for a vacation?"

As the train began to move, Jaxie Cameron, Star-Tribune columnist, who expected to miss nothing on this trip, going or coming, hurried into the observation car, which was filled to capacity, and proceeded to the rear platform. That small rectangle of space was crowded, also, but already the passengers of the Big Chief were growing tolerant of close proximity, as companion travelers quickly do. Each one conceded man evidently had had ready in his hand.

The woman glanced around the car, shyly, sat down and took the baby on her lap and appeared to her husband, who was occupied with removing the small boy's coat and cap. The child's eyes stared wide with the novelty of this strange place which was called a train. He had played with trains for as long as his abbreviated memory could recall, but this was so overwhelmingly real and different than even his youthful imagination had conjured.

"Oh, Ed, I'm so frightened about going alone," the little woman murmured. "I wish you were coming along to help manage Junior. And think if Mother should—!"

"I know. I'd go with you if I could leave—and we could afford it, Carrie. Brace up, dear, perhaps Mother will be much better by the time you get there. Let me know right away, won't you? Be a good boy, Junior, and help Mummy with sister."

Junior suddenly puckered his face and wailed, "I wanna do home wiy daddy!"

"Sh! There, there, Junior! See all the people looking at you!" his mother entreated with panic. How young we are taught to fear what people will think! "See—daddy has to go, now. The train is going to start. Listen, do you hear the bell?" Junior stopped wailing to listen for the bell, but his mother's voice sounded more strange to him—strained with anxiety and choked with unshed tears. Her husband kissed them all hurriedly and fled, as the train began to move.

Two women in section 8 across the aisle exchanged grim glances of consternation. "Wouldn't it be just our luck," observed the thin, high-nosed one who wore eyeglasses and a dull black crepe dress of last season's mode, "to have two crying children right across the aisle for three days on a train, after teaching forty noisy, scolding youngsters for nine the fact that everyone else desired to share the thrill of being on the rear platform when the Limited pulled out of the terminal, and shifted obligingly into the smallest space. A half dozen persons occupied the chairs under the awning and the others stood against the gleaming brass rail. As Jaxie opened the screen door and hesitated, two of the standees moved aside to provide space for her. One of them was the tall young man whose eyes had met hers when she left the platform some ten minutes before. Their glances met again, momentarily, and Jaxie experienced a fleeting reaction that was new in her wide experience of meeting and associating with men.

His glance flashed into a half smile that seemed, without prearrangement, to bridge their lack of acquaintance, even while there was nothing presuming about it. His eyes were very blue, even in the garish light, and their gaze caused Jaxie a momentary sensation of giddiness—or was it the sudden speed of the train, as they stood at the end railing with space gliding away from them, faster and faster?

The train slipped through innumerable skeleton frames of bridges which reminded Jaxie, ever in her chaotic state of mind, of that childish game of "Button, button, who's got the button?" and its gapping, half-opened hands of empty inquiry. Under the bridges the black oily surface of the river mirrored the flashing lights of the train that slipped over it like a necklace of gleaming jewels.

They clicked and jolted over section crossings, swerved suddenly at such an angle that those standing at the end of the railing received the full benefit of the whip-crack and Jaxie swayed precariously from her balance. Instantly, the arm of the man beside her reached out to steady her.

In his case, it would not be surprising if the White House support came in the form of co-operation in the Bulkley plan for meeting the depression, which is of a character designed to make a particular appeal to Mr. Roosevelt. THE SENATOR calls it a plan for building a "transcontinental system of self-liquidating highways." A Federal Highways Commission is to be created and eight billion of two and a half per cent bonds issued. These are to be sold to the public, the Government will be guaranteed against loss, the investors assured a fair return, three highways across the country east and west and six north and south built—20,000 miles in all—at a cost of $400,000 a mile. It is a breath-taking proposition but the report is that it has been well received at the White House. In any event, either because of this great constructive suggestion or upon his general record of New Deal loyalty, an endorsement of some sort—probably a "Dear Bob" letter—is pretty certain to go out from the President to Senator Bulkley before the primaries.

AND THERE WILL BE other steps. Before the summer is over there is every indication that Mr. Roosevelt will be involved in the primaries in at least four States—and probably more—not because he wants to, but because there is no way for him to avoid it. The ironical fact is that it is the court-packing Senators who are in trouble this year—and whom it is going to take all the White House weight to pull through. The exact reverse of this was expected.

This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace. Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

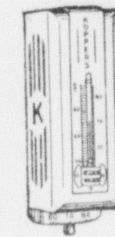

Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same element prescribed by most doctors in treating their fat patients. Lieutenant Mackey Discusses Air Craft he explained how the airships spoiled several planned attacks by him.

Despite the fate of the Hindenburg, Germany has not lost faith in rigid airships and today is expected to give the LC-130 its trial flight. This airship is filled with helium and is assigned to make eighteen round trips across the Atlantic and will use Lakehurst as its base in the United States.

"Although we are progressing in the lighter-than-air craft movements, we have a long way to go before it will ever replace the fleet. We don't know what we will be able to do in the future, but we know what we can do today. The United States has its own problems with the Atlantic on the east, Caribbean on the south, and Pacific on the west," concluded the speaker.

After the meeting, Lieutenant Mackey availed himself to answer any question asked of him. In replying to as to what caused the Hindenburg disaster, he stated that in his opinion it was escaping hydrogen ignited by air-static of which little is known.

In comparing ships with airships, Lieutenant Mackey stated that the airships are twice as fast as cruisers; their ranges are about equal; the airship has a horizon vision that will double that of a cruiser; and it costs about seventy-five times as much to operate a cruiser as it does an airship.

Harold Hanson acted as chairman of the meeting. There were selections by the Presbyterian Church octette and also solos by Arthur McCarthy, Abington. Mrs. Harold Hanson was pianist. After the meeting, games followed and refreshments were served. Ladies were guests of the Brotherhood.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service) HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Feminine nature is so constituted that nothing infuriates or embarrasses it more than to discover that the clothes in which it is garbed are identical to those on another woman.

One sure way to evade discovering a twin in one's social set is to refrain from using material as it unrolls from the bolt. There are so many ways of disguising a material that anyone can figure out a scheme. Howard Shoup, one of the Warner Bros. designers, gives simple net rare individuality in the picture, "Everybody Was Very Nice." He does a dress for Priscilla Lane which is shell pink lace over which he has applied matching lace flowers and further glamorized them with sprinklings of midge gold sequins. The frock is fashioned with fitted bodice, full skirt, very short but highly puffed sleeves, and the shortest bolero on record. With the dress Priscilla wears an ermine bolero jacket and carries a sequin bag.

In the same picture Barbara O'Neil wears a black net princess dress applied with thin lace flowers subtly picked up in tiny silver sequins.

The veillings that we have previously prophesied would be important by spring will be perfect subjects to disguise. Some of them will have woolen tufts worked in them in popcorn effect. We did this in a bodice of crisp navy veiling Ellen Clancy wears as part of one of her "Jezebel" costumes. Other veillings will be striped with narrow ribbons of satin or taffeta. Some, like the net, will have lace appliques and there will always be a smattering of sequin glitter.

However all the glitter won't be in sequins this year, for crystal beads are rearing their dazzling heads. Phyllis Brooks has a pink flannel evening jacket embroidered in these little crystal beads which she wears over a stunning but simple black crepe gown. Betty Compson deftly snowflakes a grey crepe evening dress in tiny beads.

Several centuries ago when there were not so many different types of material and surface designs were not so varied there were many "home-made" stripes, such as the sewing on of contrasting bands and the applique of flowers and designs. Although now there seems to be limitless fabrics from which to choose the old idea of making them still more unique is growing in importance.

TIMELY RECIPES You Will Want to Try!

Cupid's Magic Tramps

These Valentine candies are recommended as magically failure proof, even in the hands of beginner cooks. They are toothsome and wholesome, too, a consideration when they are to be served to children.

Three squares unsweetened chocolate; one and one-third cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk; one and one-half tablespoons butter; one to two teaspoons vanilla; two cups (nine ounces) confectioners' sugar; one-half or loaf cake:

cup chopped peanuts; one-fourth pound (one-half cup) chopped, pitted dates

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir five minutes, or until mixture thickens. Remove from fire, add butter and vanilla. Sift confectioners' sugar. Work into chocolate mixture. Fold in chopped dates and nuts. Scrape mixture into butter pan, smoothing out.

Place in refrigerator until thoroughly chilled. Cut into squares for serving, or cut with a round, or heart-shaped cookie cutter. Tiny red candles, or silvers of Angelica might be used for trimming.

Cupid's Frosting

Here is a "special" holiday frosting, which may be used on any white layer cake:

Two cups finely-powdered confectioners' sugar; one-half cup sweetened condensed milk; one-fourth cup drained maraschino cherries, chopped fine. Stir sifted sugar into condensed milk. Add cherries which have been finely chopped and beat until very smooth and creamy. Cool cake before spreading on frosting.

Date-Nut Kisses

Two and one-half cups chopped dates; one and one-half cups chopped nuts; four egg whites; one cup sugar; one teaspoon vanilla or desired flavoring. Add a dash of salt to whites and beat until very stiff.

Blend in the other ingredients and drop on a baking sheet, forming each sweet into desired shape with fingers. Oblong shape bakes well. Bake at 330 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

"Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," which opens tonight at the Bristol Theatre, offers plenty to the theatre-going public. Republic has "shot the works" unstintingly on this production, and it promises to be one of the best musicals of the season.

Patterned in spirit after the radio broadcast whose name it bears, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" presents a series of tuneful new songs, interpreted by such songbirds as Phil Regan and Tamara Geva, or by such orchestral wizards as Cab Calloway and Ted Lewis. Kay Thompson and her rhythm choir offer their share of syncopation, and the net result is said to be worthy of the attention of the most jaded musical-comedy fan.

Phil Regan and Ann Dvorak, in the leading romantic roles, try to get married in spite of desperate opposition on the part of a group of gangsters, headed by Gordon (Leo Carrillo), who want to force Regan to exert his wiles on Charlizzini, an opera singer, and lure her into their recording racket.

Jimmy Gleason, as "Danny the Duck," works hand-in-hand with Carillo, and gives the audience one laugh after another with his inimitable voice and mannerisms.

One sequence, in which Henry Armatta tries to make a radio song-bird of Baseball Player Joe DiMaggio, sets a new high for humor and showmanship.

Gene Autry, Republic's popular singing cowboy, has a featured spot in the picture as does Max Terhune and his celebrated dummy, "Elmer."

They are bound to win new fans in this, their first top-flight feature production, and may graduate from westerns into the Big Time for good.

Chuck Riesner, who in his day has been writer, actor and producer, directs the production.

RECIPES YOU WILL WANT TO TRY

Valentine Salad
Although this dish has a February 14th title, there are many occasions when you will enjoy serving it, for it will fit ideally into the menu at any season. Prepare the salad the day before, or in early morning and then store it in the icebox until serving time. This recipe yields six generous servings:

1. Soak together for five minutes, one envelope plain unflavored gelatin and one-fourth cup cold water.
2. Add, one-fourth cup sugar; one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup hot water.
3. Then add, one-fourth cup milk, vinegar, or lemon juice and two tablespoons horseradish.
4. Cool and when mixture begins to congeal, add one cup cooked beets.

cut in small pieces and one-half cup diced celery. (Combinations of vegetables may be varied. Chopped, stuffed olives also are a good addition.)

5. Turn into heart-shaped molds that have been rinsed in cold water. Chill when firm, unmold on lettuce and garnish with cheese balls and mayonnaise. Narrow strips of pimiento may be arranged in the bottom of mold, in heart shape, before pouring in salad.

POSED AS DOCTOR

NEW BRITAIN—(INS)—Police of this city are looking for a youth, who posing as a physician, has been calling at homes of young women in this city and giving them a complete physical examination. Police were notified after the youth appeared at a home here and attempted to examine two women there. He walked out when one of the women asked to see his credentials. A stethoscope comprised his only medical equipment and he carried this in his pocket, the women said. He was described as being about five feet two inches tall, weighing 130 pounds, and between 25 and 30 years old.

MATCH JEWEL BOX

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Norman Jones, an inmate of Philadelphia County Prison, has constructed a jewel box of 6,625 burned matches. The box is 24 inches long, six inches deep and six wide, with sides an inch thick. Jones is at work on an ash tray to contain 21,675 matches, if the supply holds out.

CELTICS WIN CLOSE GAME AT BUSTLETON

With close guarding featuring, the Bristol Celtics were close victors over the Bustleton A. A. quintet, last night, on the lafters' floor. Final score was 20 to 13.

At times the guarding was too close, and the result was numerous fouls being committed. The Celts proved masterful in this, and in sinking eight out of ten, provided the margin of victory. Bustleton made five foul shots.

High man in the tilt for the winners was Ralphie Cahall, who had eight points. "Punkie" Zeffries had five, and was successful in his three foul tries. For the losers, Hackney and Kilmartin excelled.
